

Proactively create a culture of diversity, equity, and inclusion in your organisation.

Having a diverse team that exists in an inclusive environment takes conscious effort. As leaders work to uncover and address bias and microaggressions while building a culture of inclusion and belonging, their effort must shift from being reactive to proactive. Bias can exist within systems or policies and place certain groups at a disadvantage across the organisation. When we think about an employee's journey from recruiting to hiring to promotion, bias creates barriers to entry and success and leaders must work to eliminate them.

The Experience

Our Inclusive Talent Management programme helps leaders sustain DE&I progress by identifying gaps across recruiting, interviewing, hiring, onboarding, development, succession planning, and promotion. Participants evaluate the current state of each area and then take that assessment even deeper by applying additional concepts of how bias and lack of inclusion can show up across talent management practices. Beyond evaluation, participants are given the opportunity to partner with their peer leaders to determine immediate and future needs regarding talent management process improvements and necessary solutions to continue implementation on a long-term basis.

Inclusive Talent Management

Address Bias to Eliminate Disadvantages
in Your Organisation

Programme Objectives:
